Go Green This Summer: Venture Out For Some Agritourism

Many families are looking for fun and educational summer activities with their children. However, there are lots of educational learning opportunities that families overlook. One of these is agritourism. So what is agritourism? Agritourism is any agriculturally-based operation or activity that brings visitors to a farm or ranch.

Agritourism is essentially bringing your family to a day on the farm or maybe even a weekend trip. Many small and large farms are catering to the new-found interest in agritourism. In fact, there may be a farm much closer than you expected.

What can you expect to do during a farm tour or stay?

Honestly this depends on the farm and what you want to experience. There are farms that give basic tours of their facilities and let you pet/feed the animals. You can also watch the day-to-day activities of the farm hands. Other farms will actually let you get down and dirty too. You can harvest chicken eggs, shear sheep, feed cattle, and learn to ride a horse. You are not limited to poultry and cattle farms. A number of produce farms give families the opportunity to pick their own berries or produce. Many times the pick-your-own farms offer fantastic deals on their produce or have free produce if you pick for them. We have a local berry farm that does a pick 2 get 1 free special. If you pick 2 pounds of berries for the farm, you are free to take a pound of berries home for yourself free. You can work and be rewarded with some fantastic locally grown produce.
